

THE TEXAS EXPEDITION.—A correspondent of the Boston Traveller, writing from the headquarters of the Nineteenth Army Corps, Braintree City, September 19, says: "At present there are here two divisions of the Thirteenth Corps and nearly the whole of the Nineteenth, on this and the opposite bank of the bay. Half our forces are already over the bay, and the march will commence in about four days. I understand a large cavalry force is to proceed in advance of the column under command of a Gen. Lee from Gen. Grant's army. At present we are very busy crossing on two steamers. Five more will soon be here, and the work will get on faster. The prospect of a thousand miles' march don't trouble the men in the least."

Military critics are busy in discussing the rationals of the causes which led to the late defeat of Gen. Rosecrans.
